EDUCATIONAL ACTIVITIES

Educational Focus

Reflecting upon the dynamic interaction between pedagogy and personality, my teaching style is best described as applied, mastery instruction. While the specific learning goals of a course are dependent upon the nature of the course, the education level of the students, the purpose of the course within the department, and the relationship between the course and related courses, I have three overarching goals for any course that I teach:

1. foster critical thinking so that students may become effective consumers of psychological information,
2. promote mastery of course content, and
3. encourage application of course materials to real-world contexts.
